MISCELLANEOUS READING. WASHINGTON.

[From the Nashville Patriot.] Washington city, the capital of the nation, the home during term time of the President, (and also the temporary residence of five hundred and ten men who confidently expect to be President,) and the seat of the United are paid punctually- and that our schemes are | States Gas works, (technically called Congress,) is situated in the District of Columbia -a territory covering a horizontal surface of ten miles square, and extending perpendicularly all the way through. As every place in the city is from three quarters of a mile to a mile and three-quarters from every where else, Washington is called, in Fourth of-July orations and that style of literature generally, "the city of magnificent distances." It derives its name of Washington from a celebrated continental officer who built the pine huts and forced his way through a very hard winter at Valley Forge, and made Corn wallis acknowledge the corp at York Town .-The principal public buildings of the city are the Patent office, where the Yankees are granted the exclusive right to manufacture and sell India-rubber baby jumpers, double 125 geared rat traps, Radway's Ready Reliefwhich is warranted to relieve you of your money, if nothing else-and other valuable 4 Prizes of $400 ap'g to $70,000 are $1,600 inventions of the age; the General Post Office where they superintend the mismanagement of the various mail-routes of the country; the 500 National Treasury, an institution of learning 400 | which has graduated more men in the art of 300 swindling the government than any ten simi 200 lar or dissimilar institutions in the world, 100,000 and the City Jail, which is the only public - building in Washington which is really devo-

of punishing other people for theirs. There are two monuments in Washington -one of red granite, erected to the memory of Smithson at his own expense, and a monu ment to the folly, penuriousness, and gratitude of the American people. The latter is about sixty feet high, with upward (though hopeless) expectations of five or six hundred feet. It is commonly called the Washington or National Monument. General Taylor caught his death in 1850 at the laying of the The list of drawn Numbers and Prizes will be corner-stone of this structure. It is hardly ish at the laying of the cap-stone.
